ASIAN POPULATION ASSOCIATION

History

Asia is the world's largest and most populous continent, and also the center of some of the fastest sustained economic growth rates in the world as well as some of the most intractable problems of poverty. It is home to several language families and many language isolates. There are many emerging population issues having significant impacts on the future of the world's population as they pose major challenges to communities and local governments across the region. Thus, there is a great need for scientific studies of population which can be translated into policy actions in countries with diverse socio-demographic settings.

Who we are

Founded in December 2007 at the Department of Demography of the University of Tehran, Iran

The Asian Population Association (APA) is a non-profit association of population specialists with the aim of drawing the attention of governments, international governmental and non-governmental organizations, and the general public to population issues in Asia and to promote demography as a science.

Population dynamics shaping the future

What we do

- Coordinating the work of Scientific Committees and Working Groups and documents research output through a wide variety of publication formats
- Organizing regional and specialized conferences
- Promote the collaboration of members with Regional and International agencies through consultancies
